The Journal of Commonwealth Literature

Edited by Angus Calder & Alastair Niven

The Journal of Commonwealth Literature was established in 1965 to provide a focal-point for discussion of literatures in English published outside Britain and the United States of America. The first number of each volume consists of an issue of critical studies and essays, and also includes a 'Symposium' of contributions relating to a single, major creative work by a Commonwealth writer. The second number is the bibliography issue, providing an annual checklist of publications in each region of the Commonwealth.

Volume XVII, no. 1 (August, 1982) contained a symposium on the work of the Canadian writer Rudy Wiebe; a special retrospective bibliography of East African writing, and articles on J.P. Clark, Ralph de Boissière, Wole Soyinka, G.M. Turnbull, Amos Tutuola, Derek Walcott, and others.

Issues of Language

A special number on issues of language is planned for 1984. Submissions on such topics as the role of the vernacular in literatures in English or their relation to those in other languages in multi-language cultures are invited, as are practical textual or intertextual studies and theoretical studies of the function of language in text. Poetry will be selected with particular emphasis on its extension of the resources of poetic language. The number will be co-edited by Pamela McCallum and submissions should reach the editors by May 31st, 1984.
