

In the Marsh

Oiled skins stick to the heat.
Minds clothed, hidden somewhere outside the reeds, lusting.
Mergansers wash and finally plunge
heaving the surface to ripples.

Reflections end.

You slide from me
as stillness penetrates.
Sunlight sucks us dry.

CHRISTINE BARKER