

Forthcoming in ariel

Law, Literature, Postcoloniality 35.1–2

Co-editors Gary Boire and Cheryl Suzack

This special issue will explore the intersections of law and literature within the contexts of postcoloniality.

Contents include

Valerie Karno on indigenous peoples and the law in the United States

Jason Gottlieb on international law and power politics

Ravit Reichman on British colonial law in Africa and Achebe's Things Fall Apart

Isobel Findlay on First Nations and Metis peoples and justice reform

Marie Therese Blanc on intersections of law and literature in Atwood's fiction

Plus articles by Christopher Bracken, Paul Patton and others.

Afterword by Gary Boire

$22.00

To preorder, contact ariel@ucalgary.ca

Call for Expression of Interest

Approaches to Teaching Ngugi wa Thiong'o (Modern Language Association series)

For the series Approaches to Teaching World Literature, the Modern Language Association Publications Committee has approved development of "Approaches to Teaching the Works of Ngugi wa Thiong'o", to be edited by Oliver Lovesey (University of British Columbia).

Examples of MLA's Approaches to Teaching World Literature can be seen in most libraries or can be ordered through the MLA website: www.mla.org/

If you wish to contribute to the volume, please send your name and mailing address to Jeremy George at the MLA office by 1 June 2006 (fax: 646 458-0030; <jgeorge@mla.org>).

