

Momina Khan
University of Saskatchewan

Seize Possibility not Assumption

Diversity, one in identity, unique in identification yet not a single story

Seize possibility not assumption, end othering people in the process of becoming

When the voice of the marginalized pierces through the armor of judgement

Silence situates itself on an island of tears filled with hope and optimism

Creation craves confusion, disruption of rhythms, and messiness of flows

Do not be scared of changeability, a powerful path to chance

Reshaping inner self desires moments of silence and isolation

We are humans with eyes to see sincerity, hearts to yearn for relationships

Inner provocation obliges morality so let it openly pledge a sense of humanity

Urge for certainty kills curiosity to question our subjectivities, objectively

Desire inquiry over certainty, involvement over numbness, and tension over assumption

Change exists in the empty space right between the US and THEM dichotomy

Think rationally, reflect critically, act ethically, and create collaboratively

Our voices and choices make us who we are to ourselves and to the human race

Let's not let our perceptions and actions be unguarded...